'My kitchen is falling apart but council is doing nothing' Mum says situation has taken toll on her mental health

By Hannah Kane

A SINGLE mother from Harlow has been battling with the council to fix her kitchen that has left her with anxiety and depression.

Katrina Kyriacou has lived in her maisonette in The Stow for six years, but for the past two years she has had to deal with knives falling out of broken drawers and mould

The 35-year-old mother-of-two said she has reported the problems to Har-low Council as many as ten times, with nothing being done.

"The whole kitchen is falling apart," Katrina said. "I'm using pins to hold up the shelves and everything is hanging or missing.

"I have reported this about ten times and had a surveyor round. The council keep saying they will fix it but nothing has been done."

The frustration has taken its toll on Katrina's mental health, and her OCD is 'through the roof'.

"The stress, anxiety and depression this has caused is unbelievable," she said. "Having to live with this is tor-

"It's just dangerous too. I have had a knife fall out of the drawer and stab me in the foot because it's not secure. My daughter has had her fingernail ripped off by a faulty cupboard.

'Just because I cannot afford my own house does not mean this is any way to live."

After a surveyor visited her home ten months ago, Katrina was feeling positive that things would change.

However, she has just been left with more disappointment.

The mother has sent pictures and written complaints time and time again, but has not heard back.

"The surveyor came round and said it needs to be fixed," she said. "I keep being promised they will get back to me, but I get nothing.

"Tm banging my head against a brick wall and my OCD is going through the roof. I have cried and cried over this."

"If someone wants to get into my house to hurt me, a sensor light will do nothing. I feel totally neglected and unsupported by the council. They keep promising and then I get noth-

However, the council says it is working to make sure the repairs are carried out.

A spokesman for Harlow Town Council said: "The condition of the kitchen has been previously raised with us but upon reviewing the case we found that the kitchen was in a very good condition when the prop erty was re-let in 2011. The kitchen was replaced before the property was relet in 2011 and it was also in a good condition in 2012 when a stock condition survey of all council was undertaken.

"Repairs for the kit-chen were raised on June 24 and HTS will June 24 and nio be attending to carry repairs. We out these repairs. We have asked HTS for an update on this. We are aware of an antisocial behaviour incident in August 2017. At this time case reviews were carried out but no further incidents have been reported since.

ARRIVA has taken over a number of routes operating around Harlow after the closure of EOS Buses.

The routes include the 66, 86, and 87 which travel to and from Harlow via Nazeing, Waltham Abbey, Waltham Cross and Epping among other places.

Start

The new routes came into force on Friday, August 3, after the services, originally offered by EOS Buses, ceased on July

Sunday service 66A and route 13 will be provided by Swallow Coaches.

Transport manger for EOS Buses, Chris Hunn, said: "Please be aware that EOS Buses will no longer be operating services 66, 86, 97 and S1 from close of business on July 31

"Routes 66, 86 and 87 will instead be operated by Arriva Herts & Essex

"There will be no change to the routes, however, there may be some minor timetable changes.
"I would like to thank all our loyal customers for their custom over the past few years. "Operating buses in today's economic climate is very tiresome.

"I hope that Arriva Buses will invest in your services improving the shape of travel in and around Harlow, Waltham Abbey and Loughton.

Arriva hopes the additional services will improve travel in the Harlow area.

The routes are the same, although Arriva has made some amendments to the timetable. Marketing manager at Arriva. Craig Taylor, said: "Arriva are making these amendments to better the customer's travel experience and we hope that the passengers in Harlow see this as a positive change for the area.

EOS monthly tickets will still be accepted by Arriva in order to save customers seeking refunds, but mobile ticket sales have now

Doctors didn't believe mum was ill – then found she had brain tumour

By Lottie O'Neill and Chris Kitching

A HARLOW mum has been told she has 12 to 18 months to live after suffering "24-hour" head-aches and waking up to an odd "herbal" smell in the middle of the night.

Mel Mirza, a mum-of-four, refused to believe doctors when they told her she was likely stressed or depressed. She asked for more testing for her worrying symptoms, only to be horrified to find out she had a brain tumour that would claim her life in under two years, reports the Mirror Online.

"I was experiencing severe, painful headaches 24 hours a day," Mel said

"I used to wake up at 4am with these bizarre smells. It's a smell that I have never smelt before. It was like a herbal smell that was verv unusual

"And I had these attacks that got worse and worse."

The 44-year-old said: "I would have to sit down to get out of them. worried it was

After being diagnosed last summer, she has battled to prolong her life and has remained upbeat despite an uncertain future.

But she has suffered a heart-breaking setback as a new tumour is growing in a different part of her brain and she will have to pay for her treatment she desperately needs privately.

Seizures

Mel said: "I was told that the original tumour was shrinking and the cavity was shrinking. Then I had my most recent MRI in June after I had two seizures close together, and there's a new area of disease developing in a different part of my brain.

"I'm strong and I'm positive, and I want to beat this. Unfortunately I don't have hundreds of thousands of pounds to get the treatment I need.

The scar left by Mel's surgery

The mum was diagnosed with the aggressive glioblastoma multiforme (GBM) tumour in June last year after she begin feeling

She has been positive and open about her condition, had started noticing her symptoms in Janu-ary after she visited her GP. She added: "Ikept coming down with illness and I was worried because I was getting heart palpitations and just being sick all the time, with colds.

I had a sinus infection and gave me antibiotics, and then I was told I had a chest infection. In March last year it just got worse."

Mel described how she began to notice strange smells, seizures and unbearable headaches that grew more severe.

She visited her doctor again and went through several tests, including blood analysis and an ultrasound of her stomach.

Her sister Nikki Lee, 43, said: "Mel isn't the type to go to the doctor or the hospital. The fact that she went to the doctor, we knew it had to be something she felt wasn't right."

Despite the rigorous testing, none revealed the tumour inside the mum's head.

Mel, who worked as a carer at a retirement home, said: "A nurse told me you have had a lot of tests and nothing is coming up, so it's probably stress. I told her I am not a high-stress person.

"I never get stressed, and I wasn't stressed. I am used to multi-tasking – working 48 hours a week and raising four children – and I am a coper."
She added: "Another doctor told me it was depression and I said 'no'. They put me on antidepressants that would help with the pain of my headaches

Neither Mel, nor her family, were satisfied with the diagnoses given, they kept pressing for

Mel said: "In the end, my mum said 'No, I've had enough of this'. Her aunt had an aneurysm and she wanted me to be referred to a specialist."

Her mum wanted her to have a full-body scan. Last June she went for a CT scan and left not knowing the results, or what they would show. However, 90 minutes later, her GP rang her and told her to come to his surgery, along with her mother, Pauline, 71, "within the hour". Mel said: "I thought, 'Oh dear, this can't be good'. We went, and he told us the devastating news that I had a brain tumour the size of a golf ball."

She added: "I took it well, really. I asked what's next and the GP said he would try to get me into a specialist hospital to remove it, but to go to a local hospital if I get gave me a full-body scan to see if the cancer was anywhere else in my body, but they said it wasn't."

Three days later, she was transferred to a different hospital where she underwent surgery to remove as much of the tumour as possible. Surgeons removed around 85 per cent of it, but there was more bad news when she received the results.

Mel said: "My oncology nurse told me, unfortunately, that it was the worst news. It was the worst form [of tumour]. I wanted to hear how we will beat it.

"They told me I would get six weeks of radiotherapy and then chemotherapy, but there was nothing else to offer."

She added: "They removed 85 upset her life, four days after she was released from hospital after her extensive surgery, she went to an Ed Sheeran gig in Camden, north London. Nikki said: "She was just going

"You think, 'Be careful, you just had brain surgery', but Mel was behaving like she had just had some minor surgery" Mel added: "I was dancing and singing, and I had a great time. You have to get on with things, don't you? I said, 'I am going to go and enjoy myself'."

The diagnosis was a devastate ing blow to her family, it has put her and her bus driver husband, Simon, 53, under financial pressure at the worst time.

MAKING THE GRADE: Harlow College students gained a 99 per cent pass rate,

A-level results give teenagers chance to look to the future

By Star reporters

STUDENTS across Harlow celebrated and looked to the future after getting their A level grades on Thursday, August 16.

This is only the second year that most A-levels have been assessed solely on exams taken at the end of pupils' second years, leading to the proportion of stu-dents gaining C grades and above falling across the country.

But that didn't stop students at Harlow College gaining a 99 per cent pass rate, with particularly strong results in chemistry, English language, history, maths and sociology.

The college also celebrated impressive results in Level 2 BTEC courses, where exams were introduced for the first time, including gaining a 100 per cent pass rate in applied science.

Impressive

As well as this results for the new technical certificates were equally impressive, with beauty students achieving distinctions, the highest possible grade, while the hospitality course saw the only distinction grade and the majority of merit grades across the country.
Students secured places at some of the country's top universities including at University College London, Bristol, Birmingham, King's College London, Not-tingham, York and Manchester.

Deputy principal Louise Turner said: "Once again our students have achieved tremendous results, reflecting the hard work of the students and staff.

"We are particularly delighted as we embark on the opening of our new college at Stansted Airport this September.

"Alongside excellent A Level results and progress directly to university many of our students are using apprenticeships as the route to combine their studies with employment.

"Our strong science technology and mathematics (STEM) provision enables many students to progress into employment and higher study in health, engineer-ing and science areas, supporting the growth of health and science employment opportunities in the area and the region."

Robert Halfon, MP for Harlow, said: "I am so proud of Harlow College, one of the best colleges in

Yet again students have had outstanding A-level results with a 99 per cent pass rate and great results in key subjects in maths and English.

"Harlow is becoming the skills capital of the East of England and ensuring that students can climb the education ladder of opportunity to achieve the very best.

"This is all to do with the hard work, commitment and sheer non-stop effort of the governors, principal, staff, students and parents. A proud day for Harlow and congratulations to all." This is the second year that A-level students at the college have been able to take BTEC subjects alongside tradi-tional A-levels.

Head of sixth form Tracy Greenall said: "We have had a very successful year creating even greater personal pro-grammes for our learners, which has seen many combining A-level subjects with BTECs, such as health and social care and applied science, enhancing the overall experience and providing a wider range of subjects to be studied. "Following on from this success, we are exploring the possibilities of introducing new A-level subjects, including A-level philosophy, to further meet the needs and interests of

with many students becoming the first in their family to go to university.

Pupils achieved a pass rate of 95 per cent, with 60 per cent achieving A* to C grades and 99 per cent of students getting into a university or getting onto a course of their choice. Headteacher Elain Heaphy said: "We are delighted for the students, they should be proud of their achievements and we wish them all the best for their future endeavours.

"Certainly, I would like to put on record my thanks to students, staff and parents for what was an exemplary team effort.

"Our sixth form draws from all the other schools in Harlow and we would congratulate these schools for their work in successgetting these students through GCSE studies and giving them the grounding for A-

"We are sure that they will share in this success. We look forward to welcoming the new Year 12 cohort in September." Staff at Sir Charles Kao UTC hope their improving results are a sign of things to come, with a brand new school due to open in September.

The college became part of the Burnt Mills Academy Trust earlier this year and saw a new head of school and leadership team brought in, among a range of other changes.

From September, the school will relaunch as BMAT STEM Academy, focusing on preparing young people – from the age of 14 in Year 10 – for careers in the industries showing a skills shortage in Harlow

Last year just 18 per cent of Sir Charles Kao students secured A to

She said: "We have worked hard with Year 13 in the very short time we have had with them and are pleased with the results they are collecting today which will enable them to go on to bright futures.
"With our brand new school

Family's pride at links with carnival

Three generations will celebrate association

By Charlotte Page

THREE generations of the family of a Harlow's first-ever carnival queen are set to take part in the town's carnival this weekend.

Maureen Yvonne Earl from Old Harlow was first crowned the Harlow New Town Carnival Queen in 1951 after being chosen from a crowd and asked to enter the carnival's beauty queen contest.

Her great grandchildren, Samuel, six, and four-year old Eden, will follow in their great grandmother's footsteps this Sunday, along with their mother Izzy and grandmother Glynis Grove.

VIP

Glynis will represent her mum Maureen as the family take their seats on a $\ensuremath{\text{VIP}}$

"It is a great honour for me, my daughter and my grandchildren to represent my mum on Sunday," said Glynis.

"Our family has many associations with Harlow.

"I have lived all my life in Harlow and raised my family here. I am proud to be part of Harlow's celebrations and particularly of the carnival.

"Mum will definitely be smiling down on us on Sunday."

The carnival was an annual event originally held in Old Harlow, before it moved to the New Town in 1951 where Maureen was crowned beauty queen. Glynis continued: "Mum, who was 14 at the time, went to the carnival with one of her friends

"She joked to her mum before she left to go 'they won't need to look any further for their carnival beauty queen, I shall

"Her mum told her to not be such a show off and big headed." Having arrived at the event, Maureen and her friend decided to take a seat and watch who was to take the title of beauty

A photographer approached them and asked if they were considering entering as there were few contestants.

"They both laughed and said 'vou won't need any more entrants' and went with the photographer," Glynis contin-

"A few more girls were gathered up and they had to walk around and then speak to the judges. When her number was called out as the winner, her friend had to nudge her and say 'it's you' as she didn't even hear it.

"She was crowned and given the sash and bouquet - a few pictures were taken for the local paper.

"They asked her for some details and then let her and her friend enjoy the rest of the carnival.'

Unfortunately Maureen's mum didn't believe that she had won following her joke earlier in the day and she was "sent to her room for telling lies'

It was only when a reporter came to interview her the following morning that her mum realised she had been telling the truth.

Glynis continued: "The reporter asked Maureen her age for the article and it was at this point they discovered she was actually too young to enter.

"No one had thought to ask how old she was as she looked older than 14.

"Thankfully, Maureen was allowed to keep the title, but I think from then onwards they checked the girls' ages."

Pride

Maureen who grew up in The Hill and as an adult lived in The Hoo, St John's Avenue and Wright's Court. She took great pride in her carnival

photo and had it on display wherever she Glynis said: "It was always a talking point whenever anyone visited us with people asking where the picture was taken."

Maureen, who was a passionate member of the St John Ambulance Brigade and helped with minor injuries at Princes Alexandra Hospital when it first open until 1980, passed away at Morris House in 2006.

Harlow Council is looking forward to welcoming Maureen's family to the carnival and hope it will create more memor ies for the family.

Festival's seven-year wish is to showcase more county talent

LinkFest to feature live music, theatre and DJ sets

By Charlotte Page

A TWO-DAY music festival is set to return to Harlow for the seventh year running and will be a celebration of local talent.

LinkFest is organised and run by volunteers and members of the community in Harlow Town Park and the showground.

The event will kick off tomor row (Friday) with a VIP night in the main marquee with perform-ances from Briar Rouge, 24k Bruno Tribute and local DJs among others.

The main showground will open ahead of the festival at around midday on Saturday and welcome a classic car show, The Outlaws bike show, a small business area, charity area, side stalls, plus food and drink.

Entertainment will begin in the marquee around 1pm with a performance from the Razed Roof theatre group, followed by the Torkildsen and a brand new set from Cadence Unplugged.

Music will continue from 3pm until 8pm on the main stage, while over in the marquee will be a soul club night running from 8pm until 11.30pm. Wrist bands for this can be purchased throughout the day for £5.

The showground will open again on Sunday at midday with live music running from 1pm through until 8pm.

Parade

Harlow Carnival is due to arrive at the showground at around 2pm with the floats from the parade joining up with the music festival.

There will also be music in the marquee and the soul club will return on Sunday evening.

LinkFest organiser Jamie Pring said: "We are proud of our last six years' achievements in the park and this year we have

Phoenix Ukulele band, Murray grown substantially,

"This can only be done with the cooperation and support of some local businesses and of course our volunteers.

"We have worked with Harlow Council this time to make sure Harlow gets another fantastic carnival and the finish point of the carnival will be joining up with the festival '

LinkFest is funded by Essex County Council's (ECC) Culture in Essex – a scheme that supports arts and cultural activity across the county.
Councillor Sue Lissimore, ECC

Cabinet Member for Culture and Communities, said: "Harlow's Town Park has played host to lots of different musical talent over the years, dating right back to the seventies and providing oppor-tunities for local communities to come together and enjoy connecting in new ways.

"LinkFest is continuing this tradition and is now a firm fixture

in the town's summer calendar. with increasing numbers of people visiting the town each

"I'm pleased we've been able to support the festival through our small grants scheme and I hope everyone enjoys the weekend.

Support

Mr Pring added: "Receiving the grant from Essex County Council has enabled us to support our volunteers and hire equipment, meaning we have been able to develop and expand the festival this year.

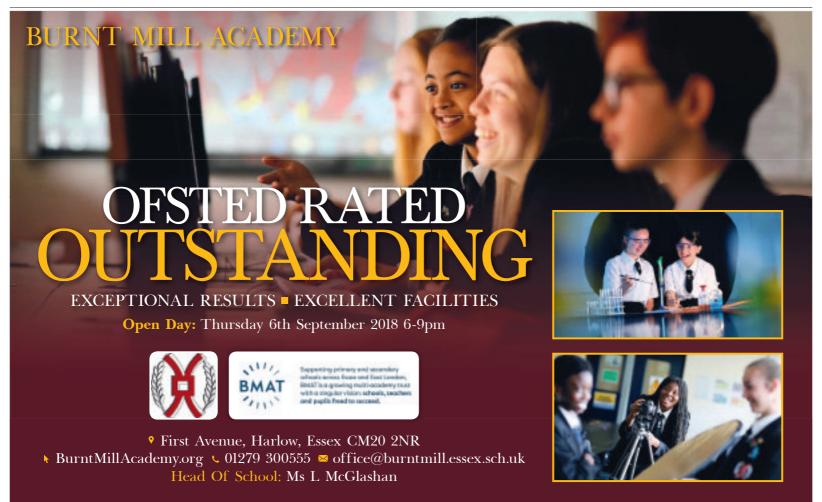

"Without this funding it would have been difficult to put on such a great festival that benefits the local community."

SOLICITORS SPONSOR THE CUSTOMER SERVICE EXCELLENCE AWARD

HE saying goes that the customer is always right, and this year's Essex Business Excellence Awards is set to celebrate those companies who go above and beyond, when it comes to putting their customers' experience first.

The Customer Service Excellence Award is presented to a business which has customer service at the heart of its operations.

Acting as category sponsor for this year's award is legal services firm Prettys Solicitors. With a whole host of clients in the UK and internationally, the Prettys team are experts in every area of law and offer a single point of contact whatever their clients' needs.

Ian Carr is chief executive at the firm and he explained why they chose to sponsor this particular award. He said: "Everyone at Prettys recognises that customer service is our lifeblood and that is the case for many successful businesses

'We have found, and continue to find, ways to improve customer service so that the client experience is exemplary.

"As customer service is so important to how we do business, we consider that we are well placed to assess how other businesses operate and can provide insight into what works for us. Our experiences then enable us to offer guidance to others as wanted. The customer service awards are therefore the ideal

Prettys' mission is to 'provide expertise, great results and peace of mind' and Ian explained what plans the firm have for the next year. He said: "At Prettys, the key focus over the coming year is to attract and engage further exceptional resource to monitor and deliver everincreasing client service. We review performance and refine customer service on an ongoing basis, actively seeking client feedback and learning from it. Our exceptional communication ensures that every client knows what to expect from trusting Prettys to deal with their legal issues. We deliver peace of mind to clients from the first conversation until we deliver the very best outcome for them."

Police cuts blame lies with Labour

I WAS interested in Chris Vince's letter about policing in Harlow. I can understand the problems with the cuts in police numbers but what he fails to mention in his letter is that the police numbers would not have fallen if the Labour government had kept the public spending under control and not overspent in the first place.

The blame for the cuts made to the public services is due to the last Labour government's inability to not overspend. This could all have been avoided if Gordon Brown the chancellor of the exchequer had kept control of the public finances.

The government that is in power now has got to clear up the problem which was left by the last Labour government and the present government should not put up taxes to cover the additional money required for the extra police officers that are needed.

I think that the working men and women of this country are already paying enough out of their wages in tax and insurance and should not have to pay any more than they are because the cost of living is going up quicker than any wage increases that they might be getting.

The one way to save some money is to scrap the police and crime commissioners' post and redirect the money saved to the police, and maybe the councillors could

Cinema eyesore needs demolishing

SURELY the Ghadami family would do greater justice to Harlow if they prioritised the demolition of the eyesore of the cinema in the Town

All the adjacent buildings to the left of this building have been demolished to make way for housing, but this, probably rat infested building, is left intact.

Surely, if the owners do not wish to demolish and rebuild, then the authorities should not hesitate to compulsory purchase the cinema.

Development objections

I AM writing in response to Mr Hood's letter in last week's Harlow Star where he bemoans the fact that Harlow Council is seeking to turn a playing field between Bushey Croft and Rushes Mead into a new housing development. I am afraid to say this is going to be the first of many that Harlow's Labour Party and their Local Plan intend to use for future housing, unless they listen to residents' concerns and remove them from their Nearly 200 residents in close proximity to the Bushey Croft estate have voiced their objections to build on land which was designed back in the 1950's to be used and enjoyed by local residents.

In recent years the council have reduced the number of times it has cut the grass on this site and as a result have been able to say that residents no longer use it as they did in the past.

Despite the objections of local residents, the final plan is virtually the same as originally proposed.

There are another eight such sites around Harlow. The Harlow Alliance Party are the only Party to be taking direct action to mobilise residents to object to these proposals and recently presented a petition with over 380 names to the council objecting to the inclusion of these sites.

The Labour Party have been trying to 'sell' the idea that homes built on its land will be council owned and let at council rent levels in the hope that people will think that their sons or daughters will be able to afford them.

However this does not already stack up because the homes being proposed at Bushey Croft, Lister House, Elm Hatch and St Andrews Meadow will be "affordable", which in truth means that most residents, based on the average Harlow family income, will not be able to afford them.

Residents living in Fennells, Barn Mead, Jocelns, Broadway Avenue, Deer Park, Greygoose Park, Rundells, Radburn Close, Hawthorns, Pollard Hatch, St Andrews Meadow and Church Leys will face the same situation if Harlow's Labour Party go ahead with their Local Plan.

TALKING POINT

Important to think about our planet

THE BIG QUESTION:

Have environmental concerns taken a back seat due to the current political climate?

Chris Vince

DESPITE David Cameron claiming when he was first elected that his government would be the greenest yet it is clear that this is something else he has failed upon. I have spoken to a number of people while canvassing across Essex who work in the renewable energy sector who tell me that this government, and the coalition before it, have made things harder for renewable energy development. Clearly renewable energy is the future and we ignore it at

I do think preoccupation with Britain's exit from the EU has taken even more focus away from environmental issues but that it is in fact the governments own austerity measures which are having a greater impact. Take pollution from cars for example. The idea of increasing tax on vehicles with high emissions is a good one in London (where there are better transport links and initiatives like the hire bikes) but the reality is many people simply cannot afford to replace their inefficient, high emission vehicles as regularly as they might want to. The idea of mend and make do might work with an old dress or a pair of trousers but with cars and vans it means more air pollution.

Meanwhile across the 'pond' it is clear that the new ÛS president has no interest

■ Every week, we'll be putting your questions to representatives of each of your main local parties. So get involved! Email your questions to get the issues that matter to you on the agenda.

in green concerns. Even the former Governor of California, who is himself a Republican, has recognised that Trump's rejection of the Paris climate change agreement will have disastrous effects for our

The next Labour government will introduce a clean air act to deal with air quality in the UK but ensure that businesses and the public are supported financially to do so. We'll also end cuts to local authorities so they too can support this aim. We'll also work with existing providers of renewable energy sources, an area that clearly need more investment than it currently does!

THE truth is that environmental concerns have never been a priority for the current government or any before it. The Tories favour economic growth at the expense of the environment and this has been demonstrated as they give the go ahead to fracking in Lancashire and airport expansion at Heathrow while ending subsidies for solar panels and providing no environmental protection guarantees once Brexit is completed.

Environmental Secretary Michael Gove has admittedly made progress in bringing green policies such as banning microbeads and some bee killing pesticides to public attention however he has fallen far short in other areas. The phase out of petrol and diesel cars by 2040 and single use plastics by 2042 is unambitious. The government should be leading the way but instead they lag behind industry leaders and retailers such as Volvo and Iceland who have action plans starting as soon as next vear.

Brexit coverage has dominated the news recently and has overshadowed the more serious concern of tackling climate change.

It could be an opportunity for the UK to surpass the EU's environmental targets and be a world leader of green economy but instead we are still unsure what

James Aicken

Brexit even means. If the public is concerned about "taking back control of our borders" then preventing an influx of climate refugees once their homes are inhabitable from droughts and flooding should be given more thought.

What happens when the UK leaves the European Union is of national importance but it doesn't change the fact that our short term vision of the future is destroying our environment and a drastic change to our economy is needed to prevent us from heading towards disaster.

YOUR CHARITY NEWS

Create a hedgehog home that features all creature comforts

WHAT better way to spend a sunny afternoon with the kids than by creating your own hedgehog house, to help the nation's favourite mammal from further decline.

The Hedgehog Street team – run by national wildlife charities the British Hedgehog Preservation Society (BHPS) and People's Trust for Endangered Species (PTES) – is urging people to help hedgehogs by building them the perfect home, providing a safe haven that's cool, cosy and comfortable, particularly if the very hot weather we had earlier this summer should make a return.

Last year, Hedgehog Street launched the first ever Hedgehog Housing Census, which looked at how, when and why hedgehogs use either homemade or artificial hedgehog houses in gardens across Britain.

Between August and October 2017, over 5,000 people responded to the Hedgehog Housing Census, and now, a year on, the secrets behind what makes a perfect hedgehog home have been revealed. The results, analysed by the University of Reading, show that:

■ Hedgehogs prefer homemade houses, but artificial houses are still a good alternative if they have the right features.

■ Hedgehogs need time to get used to a new house before they use it.

■ Feeding hedgehogs, putting water in your garden and providing bedding, such as dry leaves, pet straw or both increases the chances of a resident hedgehog moving in.

■ Hedgehogs prefer houses found in back gardens, in shaded areas.

shaded areas.

Pets or badgers don't appear to put off a 'hog from moving in.

Building your own hedgehog home is a fun and easy thing to do. To download a PDF with simple instructions on how to build two different types of hedgehog house, visit www.hedgehogstreet.org/ housingcensus

Interestingly, the results also showed that hedgehog houses positioned close (five metres) to the homeowners' house are most frequently used, indicating that hedgehogs have become accustomed to humans.

Emily Wilson, Hedgehog Officer for Hedgehog Street explained: "Until now we didn't know what type of hedgehog house was best for hedgehogs and if they were even really used at all, as this area of hedgehog ecology simply hadn't been studied. These results tell us that

Hedgehogs across the country are in need of safe places to live hedgehog houses are helping 'hogs find a place to rest, hibernate and even breed. We can use these results to help conserve these animals and give the most accurate advice to anyone wanting to provide shelter for wild hedgehogs through our Hedgehog Street campaign."

Emily continued: "It's interesting to see that hedgehogs seem to prefer houses that have been in a garden for some time, but we hope that people won't be disheartened if they have a newer hedgehog house, it just means hedgehogs need a little time to get used to it. If hedgehogs are provided with food and water in the garden and the correct bedding in the house, this really encourages hedgehogs into your area, and they could become regular night-time visitors."

Walkers raise more than £11,000 by completing Jurassic Coast trek

A GROUP of Harlow walkers have raise £11,375 for the NSPCC by completing the Jurassic Coast Challenge.

The children's charity, NSPCC gives children who are being robbed of their childhood opportunities to change this.

Thousands of children never get to experience the life they deserve because of abuse and neglect.

Along with the two thousand other people who took part in the challenge, the group from Harlow spent months training in preparation for the challenge, juggling work, children and family commitments, they still managed to completing the challenge in a respectable time of 30 hours 55 minutes, only stopping for food and water along the way.

water along the way.
The 100k challenge started in Sandbanks on the beautiful Dorset coast, following the coastal path towards Swanage, Wareham, Durdle Door, Lulworth, Weymouth, Abbotsbury where it came to it's final destination in Bridport.

Group member Kerry Boland said; "We carried our rucksacks with all essentials items through the night into the sunrise, walking up hills that peaked over 200m in height, shingle beaches, nudist beaches, we experienced blisters, toenail traumas, shoe traumas and kicking out time at the seaside nightclubs. "The walk was the

"The walk was the toughest thing I have ever done mentally and physically with points where I was so low and I was in so much pain I wasn't sure how I would get to the end.

"Its an experience that I find hard to explain, I also had some very dark moments, however we made it, and what I learnt is that if you have a great partnership,

Preparing students to plug the significant skills gap

A SCHOOL dedicated to STEM (science, technology, engineering and maths) subjects is waving students off to futures full of prospects.

Year 13 students at the new BMAT STEM Academy, in Harlow, have secured high-level apprenticeships and offers of prestigious university places.

Other students have been offered places at Anglia Ruskin University, University of Northampton, University of Winchester, London South Bank University, University of Essex, Staffordshire University, DeMontfort University, Southampton Solent University, University of East Anglia, University of Lincoln, Kingston University and University of Nottingham.

They are signed up to study the following subjects: computer gaming technology, computing, accounting and finance, chemical and process engineering, biomedial science, computer science, computer systems engineering, English literature and creative writing, maths, computer games development, computer science with artificial intelligence and mechanical engineering.

Chance to sample secondary school life at Burnt Mill Academy

SECONDARY school doesn't seem so daunting now for the youngest students joining Burnt Mill Academy. By the end of the summer,

By the end of the summer, 200 ten and 11-year-olds will have spent a week sampling what life at secondary school is like.

Burnt Mill, in Harlow, holds two opportunities during the summer break for those joining Year 7 in September to spend time on site. Almost all of those joining the school this year took the opportunity to spend the first week of the summer break having a taste of secondary school life. More will attend another summer school just before the new term begins.

Dan Bolt, assistant head in charge of Key Stage 3, said: "Students have been experiencing a variety of lessons which they will be taking in September. They have moved around the school to help them to get used to the layout and taken part in maths, English, science, PE, geography and art lessons.

"They were very quiet on the first day, but were all a lot more confident by the end of the week.

"We mixed up the groups, so everyone had one person they knew with them, but they were encouraged to meet new people and create new friendship groups.

"The idea is for them to now enjoy their summer without worrying about starting a brand-new school."

For Zahraa Dahir, the opportunity has opened her eyes to the sporting opportunities ahead. The former Church Langley Primary School pupil said: "My favourite lesson at Burnt Mill was sport where we played football rounders and

MP sees how airport apprentices are being trained to become high-flyers

ROBERT Halfon MP visited Stansted Airport to attend the relaunch of its Enterprise and Skills Academy.

As Harlow's MP, Mr Halfon has long championed apprenticeships and worked hard to pair the Academy with Harlow College.

Mr Halfon has strong ties with Harlow College, which has been ranked as one of the highest performing FE colleges in the country and Mr Halfon confirmed at the event that he was pleased to see the college would be providing expert training to Stansted's growing number of apprentices.

While there, Robert Halfon met a group of the airport's own apprentices who were either working in social media or engineering.

The apprentices also remarked that earning a wage while studying was vital and one of the main benefits of an apprenticeship.

Mr Halfon said: "We are going to be the skills capital of the East of England. Apprenticeships and skills present a ladder of opportunity for our young people.

"The work that the airport is doing in providing these opportunities is great for education as a whole and the young people of Harlow and the surrounding area."

Pupils and pensioners become pen pals thanks to lost art of letter-writing

CHILDREN and older people in Harlow are becoming firm friends by reviving the long-lost hobby of pen-pal letterwriting.

Year 8 students at Burnt Mill Academy have struck up friendships with neighbouring pensioners by writing letters and telling them about their lives and asking all about their new companions.

In return, the older residents have replied, comparing their own school days with today's, inspiring their young correspondents to work hard for the best possible future.

Rachel Fletcher, SMSC coordinator, said: "Many older people do not have extended families, so it is nice for them to feel as though someone is taking an interest in them.

"For the students, it is enabling them to build links and showing them there are people out there they can talk to.

talk to.

"The older people are telling students to value school and that it will lead them to great places. It is not just about being in school, but expanding students' appreciation and understanding of other people's situations, especially those who might not have their own families. The older people have also been telling students about how they came to live in Harlow and what their hobbies are.

"This is bringing back that tradition and getting students thinking about what life was like in the past while building up that community link. The students have been really excited to take part. It has been such a success that they will continue writing backwards and forwards.

"I am over the moon with how it has gone. It's really important that, as a school, we engage with the community. The students have been receiving lovely positive feedback on their spelling and grammar, so it is also proving good practise for them."

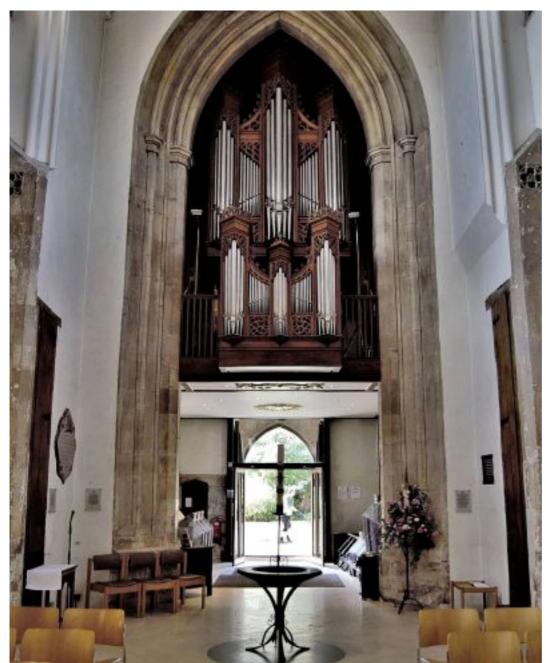

The Pen(sioner) Pals idea came from Becci Court, project development coordinator at Harlow Council, in liaison with the Rainbow Services charity which works to alleviate the effects of disadvantage, deprivation and social exclusion. She said: "I saw a similar

She said: "I saw a simila project on the news and decided to set the idea in motion in Harlow.

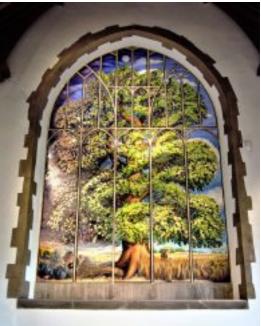

"We could not have continued with the idea, without the involvement of Burnt Mill Academy."

Community diversity will be celebrated at fun event

COMMUNITY Embrace UK is a non-profit organisation established in 2016 to support the promotion of diversity, advance social cohesion and encourage dialogues by connecting people and communities together.

As part of several initiatives to continue promoting diversity within our communities, it is holding a Community Fun Day and Party in the Park summer event on August 25

It is creating the awareness that encourages people to come together to form connections, build relations, network, share ideas and engage in a range of fun-related activities that seek to relations and healthy community growth.

It is of the notion that there is a blessing in having a good neighbour and in acknowledging the importance of this it is exploring all avenues to help build stronger community links in order to restore broken some of our individual spirits. The event will seek to attract and reach out to everyone especially those in the Staple Tye area, to join in the celebrations of a true multi-cultural diversity that exists in the town and beyond.

Attractions will include barbecues, raffles, sampling dishes from across Africa, Europe and Asia, cultural drumming and dance from the Efua

Sey academy.

There will also be a mixture of dance hall and afro beat music from the resident DJ, Permoson.

Children will even be treated with a special mermaid performance, pampering and make-up session by 'sea goddess' Charlene Boyden from Auburn Reef, as well as other fantastic activities to keep them entertained.

From a three-course dinner voucher and gym memberships (donated by the Park Inn Hotel), to a sea-side holiday package (from 2cholidays) included in the raffle prizes, a great day is anticipated.

This event is completely free to attend.

There will be plenty of activities for children

■ MALE CHOIR: Many an arthritis sufferer will tell you about the pain they endure every day of their life and the ever-limiting lifestyle. The Three Valleys Male Voice Choir from Waltham Abbey recognise that, and as such their latest concert is devoted to raising funds for Arthritis Research UK.

They are inviting people in towns in and around Harlow to support a concert being held at St Mary Magdalene Church, Harlow on Sunday, September 23 at 3pm.

As well as their usual full programme of much loved songs the Choir will have as their guests and friends, Roland Gallery and Alicia Dines as professional soloists on guitar and flute. Please come and bring all your friends and family.

This will be a great event that will be followed by a delicious afternoon tea, served in the church hall which is included in the cost of the ticket.

■ We compile our Community News pages two weeks in advance of publication. If you'd like to include a future event please make sure you tell us in plenty of time so our readers can come along.

Tiwa on a mission to help tackle poverty

TIWA Odukoya is raising money to support a project tackling poverty in Kenya, where she will be volunteering for three months.

Tiwa, 26, will travel to Kenya in September with international development organisation VSO, as part of the UK government funded International Citizen Service (ICS) programme. She will work in partnership with young volunteers from Kenya and the UK to help lift some of the world's poorest people out of poverty.

She will also live with a local host family to fully immerse herself into the community and gain a better understanding of the challenges people there face. Before Tiwa leaves for Kenya, she needs to raise £800 for VSO. Tiwa said: "I am running a 10K at Greenwich Park where I hope to beat my personal best time of 1 hour 14 minutes.

"I have been training three times a week, which has been especially challenging in this heat although the beautiful views of Hatfield Forest have made it worth it. I am also planning a bake sale at my office where I will be offering delicious cakes, biscuits and even Kenyan treats. I have also held a car boot sale in Harlow.

The money Tiwa raises will ensure that communities in developing countries continue to benefit from the work of future volunteers. Tiwa said: "I find Kenyan culture to be very rich and fascinating and so I am very much looking forward to learning about the customs through meeting my host family, trying locally produced Kenyan tea and learning as much of the language as possible.

"My project is about working with children and young people with disabilities and hearing impairments to help them obtain the skills they need to be able to achieve bright futures. I'm very excited to be part of this project as I am looking to drive meaningful change as well as develop my leadership and entrepreneurial skills."

ICS allows young people aged 18-35 to make a valuable contribution to sustainable development projects in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Tiwa said: "I've already raised £200 from sponsorships for my 10K in August. I also raised around £70 from the car boot sale.

"If you'd like to support me, you can visit my JustGiving page at www.justgiving.com/fundraising/tiwa-odukoya.

"Any donation will be gratefully received, and will make a real different to the lives of people living in poverty

On return to the UK, all ICS volunteers undertake an 'Action at Home' project, ensuring that their new skills also benefit their local communities.

More than 15,000 young people from the UK have participated in the programme since 2011.

Felicity Morgan, director of ICS at VSO, said: "Tiwa will be joining thousands of other ICS volunteers who are doing amazing work around the world, every day. "We're incredibly proud

Around £70 was raised at rhe car boot sale that UK aid is supporting young Brits to bring about positive change in some of the world's poorest communities. As an organisation working on the frontline against poverty, VSO sees how people across Britain play an important role in delivering UK aid. From the NHS and Army helping end the ebola crisis, to the millions who generously donate, and the contribution we all make through taxes, together we are all making the world a fairer, safer place."

Councillors help with clean-up at dementia centre

COUNCILLORS Chris Vince and Waida Forman as well as secretary of Harlow TUC David Forman, who provided all the gardening equipment, took part in a clean-up of the Leah Manning Centre in the town park last Friday.

The centre provides care for people suffering with dementia as well as respite for their families.

Sadly the area around the centre had become overgrown and wasn't providing the stimulating environment that residents need.

Cllr Vince said: "We all know someone who has been touched by dementia, for many it is a family member or loved one

"The staff of the Leah Manning Centre do great work for the community and we just wanted to give a little something back.

The centre is in the ward of Netteswell and local ward councillor as well as deputy leader of the Labour group,

"Community action like this is so important to people in

"Like many of the councillors in the town I got involved in local politics to make a positive difference to people's lives and I hope we have done some of that [during the clean-up].

Mr Forman is a professional gardener and he and Waida have been involved in a number of similar gardening projects across the town, focusing on the needs of elderly or disabled residents.

He said: "For many elderly or vulnerable people looking after their garden isn't always possible or financially viable and it is important to do what we can to help them."

Emma Thompson in The Children Act

THE CHILDREN'S ACT (12A) ★★★★

DAME Emma Thompson delivers one of the most beautifully calibrated, heartrending performances of her career in The Children Act, adapted for the screen by Ian McEwan from his 2014 novel.

Donning the robes of a judge, who tranquilises her emotions when she presides over cases at the Royal Courts of Justice in London, the two-time Oscar winner elegantly reveals chinks in her character's brandished armour.

Despite her best efforts at cool detachment, guilt and regret eventually spill over as one deliberation reaches its summation.

For the opening hour, Richard Eyre's courtroom drama is a riveting character study.

Thompson wrestles with life-or-death decisions with a stoicism and haunting solitude that comes at the expense of personal relationships.

Once a contentious central case is closed and the judge faces the ramifications of her carefully weighted words, the film unravels in a concluding act devoid of emotional heft. It's a muddled, unsatisfying resolution to an artfully composed study that promises so much.

The Honorable Mrs Justice Maye (Thompson)

is a slave to the law.

Her heavy workload leaves scant time for husband Jack (Stanley Tucci) and he shocks his wife by confessing his intention to have an affair.

Unable to respond, Fiona is called away to deal with the urgent case of 17-year-old leukaemia patient Adam Henry (Fionn Whitehead).

The boy and his parents (Ben Chaplin, Eileen Walsh) are Jehovah's Witnesses and it is contrary to their faith to accept blood.

Without a transfusion, Adam will die and senior staff at the hospital are concerned that Adam is being influenced by his parents.

Since the patient is a few weeks shy of his 18th birthday, Fiona wields the power to force him to accept the blood that could save his life.

Mark Berner QC (Anthony Calf) leads the case for a transfusion and Fiona visits Adam in hospital to assess his state of mind.

Aided by her fastidious clerk Nigel (Jason Watkins), Fiona must deliver her ruling while attempting to resuscitate her marriage.

The Children Act is a handsome showcase for Thompson and she never disappoints, even when the human drama around her feels contrived.

Rising star Whitehead, who dodged bullets in Christopher Nolan's Dunkirk, lingers in the memory, more so than Tucci's neglected spouse, who is starved of screen time to truly convince us that he demands our sympathy.

Eyre directs at a pedestrian pace, allowing us sufficient time to chew on moral conundrums and come to our own conclusions.

My verdict is that his intelligent, sensitively handled film fails to achieve its full potential.

SCATHING SATIRE

BLACKKKLANSMAN (15)

eleased almost exactly one year after the Unite The Right rally in Charlottesville, BlacKkKlansman handcuffs racial divisions in present-day America to the outlandish true story of a black police detective, who infiltrated the Ku Klux Klan in Director Spike Lee's impassioned, conscience-pricking satire on corruption and bigotry is based on a memoir by retired Colorado Springs officer Ron Stallworth and walks a tightrope between fact and stranger-than-fiction, seizing every opportunity to echo battle cries of the 2016 US presidential election.

Thus, David Duke, the former Grand Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, who is portrayed on screen by Topher Grace, proudly addresses a room of his ardent supporters and sincerely thanks them for putting America first.

"America will never elect somebody like David Duke president of the United States," scoffs detective Ron (John David Washington) to colleagues on the force.

Lee, who co-wrote the script, makes abundantly clear his thoughts on history repeating and he bookends his call-toarms with sickening footage from Charlottesville of a car being driven at speed into counter-protesters, which left one woman dead and many other people injured.

A disorienting opening salvo featuring Alec Baldwin as a tub-thumping white supremacist segues to Colorado Springs. Ron (Washington) is persuaded to join the local police force as part of a diversity drive

This doesn't include visibility because Ron is consigned to the records room, where he suffers abuse from fellow officers like Andy Landers (Frederick Weller).

Eventually, Ron compels Chief Bridges (Robert John Burke) and Sergeant Trapp (Ken Garito) to utilise him in the field and he goes undercover at a local rally organised by Patrice Dumas (Laura Harrier), president of the black student union, who has invited civil rights leader Kwame Ture (Corey Hawkins) to speak to the membership.

Back at headquarters, Ron responds to a newspaper advertisement for new members for the Ku Klux Klan and he impresses local chapter president Walter Breachway (Ryan Eggold). Ron foolishly gives his own name over the telephone so when the time comes to meet Walter in person, Detective Flip Zimmerman (Adam Driver) poses as Ron and spits out racist bile on cue to perpetrate the deception.

Walter's second-incommand Felix Kendrickson (Jasper Paakkonen) isn't convinced but his concerns are overruled when the real Ron develops a telephone friendship with David Duke (Grace), who is due to visit Colorado Springs in a few weeks.

BlacKkKlansman nestles uncomfortable truths in an outlandish narrative, which pays tribute to "the lackie Robinson of the Colorado Springs police force" as he outwits the KKK from the inside.

Washington and Driver are a groovy double-act and the script strikes a pleasing balance between suspense and humour.

Lee occasionally over-eggs his deliciously tart pudding like his choice to juxtapose climactic scenes of characters chanting "Black Power" and "White Power". Sometimes, restraint lands the heaviest blows.

ELLA WALKER talks to Jamie Oliver about his new Italian cook book and TV series and finds the celebrity chef in a rather reflective mood

HREE years ago, Jamie Oliver turned 40, and he really "didn't enjoy it much." The prospect of entering his fifth decade made The Naked Chef more than a little "reflective", he admits.

Meanwhile, his long-time mentor Gennaro Contaldo - who guided Oliver through his early days at the late Antonio Carluccio's Neal Street Restaurant during the Nineties was edging towards the big 7-0.

"He was in a similar but different reflective kind of moment," remembers Jamie. Getting away, escaping for a bit became increasingly appealing to them both. "Me and Gennaro felt we needed that time personally."

Italy, Gennaro's homeland, became the destination, and the pair spent months travelling from the northern mountains to the southern islands, across the seasons. The result is Jamie's latest cookbook and Channel 4 series, Iamie Cooks Italy.

It's not just about the duo barrelling around Italy gorging on pasta in an effort to scrub out the years though. Instead, the pair set out to learn from the last generation of Italian 'nonnas women in their 80s and 90s who "didn't grow up with fridges, freezers, microwaves, gas, electricity – we're talking about old school," notes the Essex-born restaurateur.

The aim was to capture "a snapshot, a moment, a bit of history", and by meeting the "matriarchs of the best cooking on the planet", help preserve a way of cooking and eating that could cease with a generation.

"I am, and I think they are," says Jamie, when asked if he's worried the food of the nonnas is being eroded. "Things fade, things go, things that are loved and important and really good for family nutrition, or communities or farming or fun they can be going for hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of years, [but] it only takes five years for something to

"Every single nonna without question, said, 'Share this, get this to as many people as possible, people aren't cooking that in this village anymore," he continues

'It's fair to say that the new generation of young Italian boys and girls are not cooking like the one before, and the one before and the one before that."

Strangely, he says the recipes in the book are "almost smoke and mirrors" – the food is important, but with every encounter, whether it was making orecchiette by hand with nonna Graziella in Puglia, or eating sweet and sour rabbit with nonna Marina in Salina, it increasingly became apparent that Jamie and his crew were working on more than a cook book, they were making a record of "life and being grateful".

"It's about love and seizing the moment," he says, keen to not sound overly romantic. "We laughed and cried a lot."

He tells of making tiella, with nonna Linda in Puglia. a baked long grain rice dish bejewelled with tomatoes. courgettes and mussels ("She shucked these mussels, not for mussels' sake, but almost as a seasoning - it was delicious"). "She was so welcoming," remembers Jamie. "I was introducing everyone outside in this square, but I kept doing really s Italian.

"I kept getting it wrong, and every time I got it right, the bells would ring.

"We started giggling and we just giggled like kids for 15 minutes."

Eventually they got to around to the tiella, and "while it's cooking you've got an hour to talk. We're talking about how hard the winters were and life and money and family.

"Then it was, 'How many kids have you got? (Jamie has five).

"As a parent, food is originally used to nourish your growing baby, and then your child, and then your teenager, and then they leave and you use food to bring them back because you want to see them again. You use it like a magnet, it's like currency."

"It's about knowledge," he adds. "If you truly love something, regardless of how old (you are) or what people think of you, it's still OK to hunt and search and grovel for knowledge.

40 minutes, or until golden and bubbling. 5. Pick the remaining thyme leaves, toss in a 3. Stir in the flour for a little oil, and scatter few minutes, then over for the last five gradually add the milk, minutes. Leave to stand for 15 minutes, then dig a splash at a time. stirring constantly

Here are some of the wines I chose for my little sipping guinea pigs; a white, a pink and an unusual red.

Make the most of them and pour when you enjoy a late summer barbecue because soon we'll be talking about warming reds to put life back into your toes after an afternoon sitting in chilly football stands. VDV Organic Verdejo 2016 (£7.99, the Co-op, 13% abv) is a lovely white from the Castilla y León region of Spain, a place I was lucky enough to visit last year. The grapes grow south of Valladolid (a one-time capital of the country and the place where Christopher Columbus died) on 800m-high windswept plains. The wine has notes of stone fruit, flowers, and a lemon freshness, and to taste it is crisp, fruity, dry and very drinkable.

Ooooh, that's pretty" was the general exclamation at the elegant embossed bottle of Fleur de Prairie Côtes de Provence Rosé 2017 (£7.29, Aldi, 13% abv).

It is indeed pretty, and the wine inside is pretty too. It's a pale blush of a pink, with layers of aromas which include red fruits and sweet strawberry, a touch of nectarine and peach, and a brightness of citrus. The flavours are more of the same, but it was the nose which kept us all talking and exploring. Flowers! (someone said) and indeed there was a brush with honeysuckle.

Solato Lambrusco (£7.50. Asda, 11% abv) was a bit of a curve ball and was definitely a Marmite wine - my tasters either liked it or they didn't. This sparkling red has been a wow with the blind-tasting people at the International Wine Challenge, where it won a silver award. Not only that, it picked up the trophy for great value sparkling under £12.

It is a rich, deep, purply-red colour and the aromas are of ripe, plump, summer fruits - delicious damsons, blackcurrants and strawberries. In the mouth those same fruits are reflected, but there's also a note of dried herbs made tingly by the excitable bubbles

■ Also in my glass... If you think of rum I bet you think of the Caribbean; but in the case of Dead Man's Fingers (£22, 70cl, Asda, 37.5% abv) you should think Cornwall.

This spiced rum has been created by the team at the Rum & Crab Shack restaurant in St. Ives and is now picking up quite a following.

It's a blend of Caribbean rum and spices and I'm told it is inspired by such Cornish flavours as saffron cake, spiced fruit and the Shack's own Pedro Ximenez ice cream (sounds yum! PX is a lush, unctuous delicious sherry).

The aromas are great - vanilla, caramel, orange, a tingle of pepper, raisins and baking spices. It is soft in the mouth, with a good bite of spice, but coated with creamy vanilla. Yes - I definitely understand the inspiration of the PX ice cream.

Sip Dead Man's Fingers with pineapple juice or ginger beer to complement the spices.

INGREDIENTS:

(Serves 4) 4 white or red chicory 1 head of celery 2 sprigs of fresh rosemary Olive oil 4 oranges (juiced) 1tbsp runny honey 1tbsp red wine vinegar 4 slices of sourdough bread 1 clove of garlic Extra virgin olive oil 200g ball of burrata 2 sprigs of fresh flat-leaf parsley 1/2-1 fresh red chilli (optional) Sea salt and pepper

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 200°C. Trim the chicory and halve lengthways. Trim the celery and cut 10cm from the base, saving the top half for other cooking, and reserving the inner yellow leaves. Use a speed-peeler to remove the base and stringy outer edges, then slice lengthways 1cm thick. Place the chicory and celery in a roasting tray. Strip in the rosemary leaves, drizzle with a little olive oil, add a pinch of sea salt and black pepper and toss to coat. Roast for 25 minutes. 2. Remove the tray from the oven to a high heat on the hob. Squeeze over the orange juice, drizzle over the honey and vinegar, add a splash of water and bring to the boil.

Give it a stir, then carefully transfer back to the oven for a final 10 minutes, or until nice and sticky and the liquid has reduced.

3. Toast the bread, halve the garlic clove and lightly rub the cut sides over the toasts, then place on your plates. Drizzle with a little extra virgin olive oil, then divide and tear over the burrata. 4. Delicately spoon over the roasted chicory and celery. and drizzle over that flavour-packed dressing. Pick over the parsley leaves and reserved celery leaves. Finely slice and scatter over a little chilli before serving, if you

INGREDIENTS:

(Serves 8) 2 oranges 200ml limoncello 4tbsp runny honey 200g sponge fingers 200ml good espresso (cold) 250g mascarpone cheese 250g natural yoghurt 1tsp vanilla bean paste 250g ripe cherries Extra virgin olive oil 100g white chocolate

METHOD:

1. Use a speed-peeler to peel strips of zest from the oranges into a small pan. Squeeze over all the juice, add 100ml of the limoncello and two tablespoons of honey, and simmer over a medium heat until you have a thick syrup. 2. Cover the base of a 24cm serving bowl with half the sponge fingers. Mix the cold espresso with the remaining limoncello, then drizzle half of it over the sponge layer, pressing down lightly to help it absorb the coffee mixture.

3. Whisk together the mascarpone, voghurt, vanilla paste and remaining two tablespoons of honey until smooth, then spoon half into the bowl in an even layer. Remove the stones from the cherries, tearing the flesh over the mascarpone. Lay the remaining sponge fingers on top, drizzle over the rest of the coffee, and finish by spooning over the remaining mascarpone. 4. Spoon the syrup and candied peel over the tiramisu, and drizzle with a little extra virgin olive oil. Cover and pop into the fridge for at least four hours, or overnight.

5. Shave or grate over the white chocolate to finish.

Wordsquare

Give yourself ten minutes to find as many words as possible using the letters in the grid. Each word must use the central letter and at least 3 others, and letters may be used only once. You cannot use plurals, foreign words or proper nouns, but verb forms ending in 's' are permitted. There is one 9-letter word to be found.

How you rate:

15 words - average; 20 words - good; 25 words - very good;

PROPERTIES THAT CAN BE HOME AND OFFICE

Ross Norman-Clarke picks out a selection of homes that can double up as your place of work as well ith more and more people choosing to work at least part of the time from home, the popularity of properties with a study/home office, or with the potential to create one – for example, in an outbuilding – is increasing.

Nestling in a tranquil rural setting between Feering and Coggeshall, Grade II-listed Cockerells Farm is a handsome country house dating in part from the 18th century, with later additions including a former bakehouse which was converted in the last 20 years. Arranged over three floors, the accommodation in brief includes a total of six bedrooms (two with en suites); two family bathrooms; three principal reception rooms with period features including fireplaces and exposed beams; a beamed farmhouse-style kitchen/breakfast room; a utility room, a boot room – and a study. The formal gardens and grounds extend to some 1.6 acres and feature a run of outbuildings including a garage with guest accommodation above, which could easily be utilised as a more substantial home office. Cockerells Farm is for sale through Strutt & Parker, with a guide price of £1.275 million.

Located in the heart of picturesque Great Bardfield, and currently on the market through Mullucks Wells with a guide price of £595,000, Grade II-listed Royce House is a lovely village property with a wealth of period character and features, including attractive pargetting, sash windows, original floorboards and exposed timbers. On the ground floor is a 24ft sitting room featuring an inglenook fireplace housing a log burner, a spacious country-style fitted kitchen/dining room with integrated appliances and French doors into the garden, a study/home office with extensive fitted shelving, and an inner hall with a cloakroom and a utility off. Upstairs, and accessed via a semi-vaulted split level landing, is a three-room master bedroom suite, three further double bedrooms and a family bathroom. Outside, a shared private driveway leads to a double cart lodge. The courtyard-style rear garden is largely paved, with raised beds.

Sylvana is a large bungalow in Little Warley with a games room which could serve as an office

For sale through Hetheringtons John D Wood with a guide price of £595,000 is The Beehive - a modern detached family home in Hook End. Extended and refurbished, it now offers extremely well-presented accommodation including a lounge with log burning stove, a separate dining room with bi-fold doors to the rear patio, a further reception room/bedroom 3, a combined kitchen/breakfast and garden room with Shaker style units and fitted appliances, a study and a cloakroom, while upstairs are two double bedrooms and a luxuriously appointed bath/shower room with under floor heating. Outside, there is front parking for several cars and access to a double length garage. The rear garden has a paved patio with the remainder mainly laid to lawn.

Furze Lodge is a spacious and beautifully presented family home set well back from the road in the village of Mundon, near Maldon For sale through Fenn Wright with a guide price of £915,000, it offers four double bedrooms – all with fitted wardrobes and one with an en suite, a family bathroom, a 21ft living room with a log burner, a separate dining room, a family room with an orangery-style skylight and bi-fold doors into the rear garden, a bespoke, dual aspect fitted kitchen/breakfast room with integrated appliances, a utility room, a cloakroom and a study. The property is set in attractively landscaped gardens which extend to 0.2 of an acre and back onto open farmland and woodland walks. A substantial driveway provides off-road parking and access to a detached double bay cart lodge. To the rear of the garden is a range of outbuildings including a workshow/office with power connected.

a workshop/office with power connected. Finally this week, for sale through Hilbery Chaplin is Sylvana - a substantial detached bungalow occupying an unusually large plot in Little Warley, within easy reach of Brentwood station and town centre. Accessed from an impressive carriage driveway providing ample off-road parking, the property includes a vaulted reception/dining hall, two further reception rooms, five bedrooms (one with an en suite), two family bath/shower rooms, a study/home office, a 23ft fitted kitchen/diner with granite worktops and a range cooker, a utility room and a cloakroom. The exceptionally long rear garden is mainly laid to lawn but includes a large terrace, a Roman-ended swimming pool with adjacent changing rooms, a double garage and an adjoining games room with power and light (making it ideal for additional home office space). The guide price: £1.15 million.

Gardening shouldn't jeopardise our safety... perhaps the answer lies in a less tidy plot

groundskeeper was awarded £226m earlier this month after a jury ruled his terminal cancer was caused by the weedkiller Roundup was a shock to the gardening

Dewayne Johnson, 46, had taken Roundup's maker Monsanto to court in the US and the jury also found the firm had "acted with malice or oppression" and ruled it knew, or should have known, the weedkiller was dangerous.

Monsanto plans to appeal. But what does it mean for us and how we have gardened - and indeed farmed - for decades?

The ruling cannot be ignored. With increasing evidence linking the use of glyphosate-based weedkillers to cancer, gardening stores on these islands are reviewing whether they will continue to sell the likes of Roundup and similar.

Gardening isn't easy. We seek to control and tame nature, fashioning it to our desires.

We often want neat solutions... tidy lawns, neat borders and neatly pruned plants.

We want the plants which we purposely introduce into our gardens to flourish and all others to be banished beyond our boundaries.

Sometimes we recoil at species which, having been found in far-flung places by our forefathers and introduced to our gardens as rarities, take Plants like Japanese knotweed. We want it out killed, destroyed.

But we are beginning to become aware that our stewardship of even our own garden plots can be a complex environmental and personal safety issue.

The answer may be... whisper it... less tidy gardens.

A new reality is dawning, one where we may look back aghast at the way we dumped chemicals into our plots to make them "perfect" and we will try and find new ways of gardening in harmony with nature.

During the recent drought I noticed that although my lawn was a crispy brown, there was some green dotted through it.

Yes, the dandelions had made it through, their long thirsty tap roots hoovering up the last drops of water.

Other tap roots, such as plantain and dock, need to be dug up completely by hand - a job that's best done when the soil is soft.

Annual weeds aren't doing so well in the drought and a quick hoeing of these soon finishes them off as they shrivel up.

What other methods are available that will not harm you or the environment?

Weeds need leaves to photosynthesise - the process whereby they convert light into energy. Constant removal of a weed's leaves weaken the plant and if you completely smother it with light-excluding materials such as dark polythene, eventually it will die

This is a tried and trusted method for cleaning an area of soil - you can also use old carnet and if you don't like the look of this, you could disguise it with some bark mulch. It will take time but eventually you will have weed-free soil.

Another version of this, which I favour, is to weed as much as you can and then use a heavy mulch of bark to suppress future weed growth. For this to be really effective you will need to pile it on about six inches deep.

I also like to plant closely and use groundcovers as weed suppressors.

I recently planted a selection of Vincas which will form a green carpet can be started into growth in the greenhouse.

- Having trouble with earwigs on your dahlias? Make traps with pots stuffed with shredded paper and remove earwigs daily
- Prune climbing and rambling roses if they have finished flowering.
- Conifer and evergreen hedges can have a final trim to tidy up before autumn slows down their
- A high-phosphate feed for the lawn will encourage strong root growth, a good measure to strengthen it for winter.
- Colchicum, sternbergia and autumn crocus should be planted as soon as they are available in garden centres.

and keep out weedy competitors.

There are other weedkillers on the market that don't contain glyphosate and Yellow, there: The dandelions didn't are often acid based. These will burn off the leaves but not penetrate to the root system so will need regular application.

Home made versions include vinegar mixes with liquid soap or simply pouring boiling water on the weeds.

Again you won't have root penetration so personally I think you're better pulling them out.

Whatever your method, it's not worth risking your health for the sake of a neat garden.

So I think we should all relax a little and be sensible about how we approach our gardening.

ASK DIARMUID

I want to redo my flower beds. I'm removing old plants and want to put in something with a wow factor. It's a sunny site - have you any ideas?

Claro

A Good for you - too often we hare reluctant to ring the changes and to recognise when something is no longer working or exciting us.

A sunny site means you have plenty of options, though the first thing I always do before any replanting is to improve the soil, preferably with buckets of well-rotted manure or garden compost.

As for the wow factor - well that comes in the form of hot colours, dramatic foliage or even tropical-style plants.

Some of my favourites at the moment are the really dramatic big heads of agapanthus and zingy colours from dablias from dahlias.

Add to that some laterflowering perennials such as heleniums and rudbeckias and you have the start of something wow!

PLANT OF THE WEEK

CROCOSMIA

It was delightful to see the hedges in the South West of Ireland ablaze with wild crocosmia and fuchsia recently.

Crocosmia, or montbretia as' it's often known, is a South African native that has made itself at home here. It's an elegant combination of swordshaped leaves and arching spikes of bright orange flowers. One of the best known cultivars is 'Lucifer' with devilishly deep-red blossoms. I also like some of the yellow forms such as 'Mount Usher'.

Plant in sunny, moderately fertile soil that retains some moisture as you will find flowering diminishes in very dry soil. The cheapest option is to buy corms, which are like bulbs, and plant in spring at a depth of 3-4ins.

brilliant way to maximise space in your child's bedroom is to use a themed or cabin bed. Choose one with extra storage underneath, a built-in seat, or a fun tent-like canopy.

If your budget won't stretch to a purpose-built bed, consider adding to vour child's current one, with a simple DIY canopy made of MDF or an add-on bed tent, £12 to £15 from Ikea.

Create a fun forest feature wall with tree-patterned wallpaper. There are good selections on Wallpaperdirect. com and ilovewallpaper.co.uk. Or go for tree-design wall stickers, which come in a huge range of colours and designs (try Nutmegwallartstickers. co.uk or Vinylimpression.co.uk). Keep things simple with white or pale grey walls and white woodwork Go for hard-wearing sanded floorboards, engineered wood or laminate flooring - it's easy to clean and will withstand anything your child can throw at it (literally).

Keep little toes toasty with a thickpile, star-patterned rug, too.

A simple white desk will grow with your child, taking them from their first doodles through to homework and playing computer games. Invest in a height-adjustable office-style chair to go with it, to provide proper support and encourage a healthy posture.

Stick to a grey-and-white colour scheme for larger accessories, such as bedding and the rug, but brighten things up with pops of sunshine yellow and grass green on smaller details, such as lamps and cushions. A canvas teepee makes a brilliant den, chill-out space and reading nook. Fill it with cushions, a snuggly throw and their favourite cuddly toys, then string fairy lights around the top for a cosy glow at bedtime.

If you're on a budget, make your own wigwam with a flat sheet and thick bamboo garden canes tied together at the top. Storage is vital in a kids' room, so choose a tall white bookcase (make sure it's fixed to the wall to prevent it toppling over). Baskets are great for stashing anything from games and books to cushions, while an underbed drawer will stop toys from taking over.

Kids will be begging to be sent to their room thanks to this stylish yet fun star-themed design, writes JENNY WOOD fully-fledged member of Generation family for property ladder is still a step out of reach, renting can sometimes feel frustrating.

It's your home – except, well, it's not really, is it? Somebody else is the boss of it, which – while there are some pros to this - means there are plenty of less-than-ideal cons. too.

But, as somebody who's been renting for two decades, I've learned (often the hard way) that there are certain things you can do to help make living as a rent-paying tenant the best it can possibly be. Here are my five top tips..

1. BE ON GOOD TERMS WITH YOUR LANDLORD/LETTING AGENT

WHEN you're looking for a place to rent, remember you're vetting the people you'll be renting with/from, as much as the property itself. Mutual trust and respect and an ability to communicate will count towards a lot.

There might be times when things go wrong and need to be fixed, fast. A broken toilet/tap/boiler, for instance.

The good thing is, where a plumbing disaster due to wear-and-tear or technical issues is concerned (or any similar scenario), your landlord will be picking up the bill. The sometimes not so good thing is, you'll be relying on a third party to sort things out. Now, this doesn't automatically mean vou've got a headache on your hands. but it might be a bit of a nuisance and you'll be doing yourself a favour if you get on good communication terms with your landlord/letting agent from day one, rather than waiting until something 'goes wrong' to make contact.

2. STREAMLINE, STREAMLINE, STREAMLINE...

IT'S often said that our European cousins are much better at the whole renting game than us, being far more likely to rent their 'forever home,' Personal space Nobody dreams of renting a house forever - but if this is the situation you're in, make the most of it, says ABI JACKSON

> while us UK renters might find moving a lot (I stopped counting at 13), and it sucks.

The good thing though? You'll get so sick of packing and unpacking and losing money to removal vans (and cramming all your worldly belongings into one small bedroom, if you're sharing a house), you'll reach a point where you just don't care for 'stuff' any more.

I saw the light after move number 11 and waved goodbye to clutter for good.

Do yourself a favour and get strict about the 'stuff' you let into your life. The next move will be a lot easier and, without even really trying, you'll be living a less consumerist lifestyle and will have more money to spend on experiences (tick, tick, tick)

3. GIVE YOURSELF REASONS TO GET OUT OF THE HOUSE

LIVE in a shared house? No matter how great your housemates are, there will be times when you desperately wish you could afford your own place. Plus, self-comparison is part of the human condition, and if there are moments of mild (or severe) despair, when you're wondering how you've not managed to bag that mortgage yet, while everyone around you is upgrading their kitchen – you're not Until that day comes for you, though, you need to make the best of the situation you're in now and embracing life outside your four walls can play a big part in this.

Make dates with friends, join a club. go for walks, volunteer in your local community (no seriously, try it). Your life will be richer, your mental wellbeing will benefit, and you'll find yourself seething about coming home to an already-occupied sofa a lot less.

4. MAKE YOUR BED KING

YOU might not own the bed frame, or the walls around it - but that does not mean you don't own the right to a decent night's sleep.

Good sleep is the foundation of so many things (your health, your work performance, your overall zest for life and all the people in it) so prioritise it and do your best to make it happen.

Renting doesn't have to mea putting up with a wafer-thin mattress or not-quite-right bedding. If your landlord doesn't feel the same way, save up and invest in the best mattress you can afford (it'll be some of the best money you've ever spent), and a pillow you look forward to sinking your head into every night. Treat yourself to some fabulous bed linen too; as far as 'home purchases go, you can pick up some great designs at reasonable prices, and vou'll get way more pleasure from it than a TV upgrade.

5. FIND WAYS TO GET PERSONAL

ONE of the most frequently-cited phrases from long-term renters is 'I just want to be able to hang whatever pictures I want on the walls!

There's a general assumption that landlords don't want tenants to make their house too much of a home (by banging nails into walls, that sort of thing). Have you actually spoken to your landlord about this though? There's no harm in asking.
Even if nails are out, there are lots of other ways you can personalise a space without permanently affecting the actual walls or structure.

Get creative and remember that little touches can make a big difference.

Everybody needs some home comforts, even if it's just a throw from Matalan, a few coloured utensils in the kitchen that feel more like 'you,' or a stack of books on the coffee table that light a spark every time your eye catches them

You may not be putting down permanent roots in this property, but right now, it's home - so don't underestimate the importance of making it feel that way rexit and the political high jinks surrounding our leaving the European Union won't stop car makers popping out new models like there's no tomorrow.

like there's no tomorrow.

Which means the UK's new number plate change – with '68' replacing '18' from September – means only one thing – there are more new cars than ever to choose from.

Mazda is leading the way with upgrades to its CX-5 SUV, the Mazda6 saloon and estate and to the iconic MX-5

Volvo has a new model and it's not an SUV but a stylish estate that will be one of the last new models Volvo produces with a diesel engine. The V60 line up will be priced from £31,810 for a D3 manual.

Latest versions of Hyundai's flagship SUV, the Santa Fe, will be in dealer showrooms from September, with prices starting at £33,425. As well as fresh new exterior and interior styling this latest generation Santa Fe introduces an array of new equipment, safety and powertrain features.

Ford is getting active on the crossover front with pumped up versions of the Fiesta and Ka+ superminis. SUV-like styling and raised ride heights set the so-called Active models apart. The Ka+ Active is priced from £12,950, while the Fiesta Active costs from £17,795.

The latest update of the Mazda6 is the most comprehensive yet, offering a fresh look inside and out. There's new seating, a 2.5-litre petrol engine option and an even broader range of safety features. Prices will start from £23,045.

Toyota has added a highly specified Design grade to its sharply styled C-HR crossover plus adding features, freshening the interior look and offering a bold new blue body colour. The Design version has heated front seats and powered lumbar support, plus a central touchscreen control. The C-HR is one of the top three selling Toyotas in the UK and prices start at £21.880.

The new Maserati Levante GTS comes with the same Ferrari-built 3.8-litre V8 unit which powers the company's flagship Quattroporte GTS but it has been re-engineered to work with the SUV's Q4 Intelligent All-Wheel Drive System and retuned to deliver 550bhp.

Lexus has now added a genuine sevenseater version of the standard RX model. It's called the RX 450hL and comes with an extra third row of seats in the back. The entrylevel seven-seater SE costs £50,995 – some £2,305 premium over the equivalent entrylevel five-seater SE.

The latest generation of the all electric Nissan Leaf now has an average range of 168 miles of mixed road motoring or 250 miles of city work. In effect that's around 47 per cent more range than the old model. Prices start from £21.990.

Despite being the same length and having the same wheelbase as its predecessor, the new Kia Ceed is slightly lower and wider. The Ceed will be priced from £18,295 for a range that features four trim lines including a high-spec limited number of First Edition

The new Fiat 500 Spiaggina '58' special series will be produced in a limited edition of 1,958 cars and is only available as a convertible. Standard kit includes Uconnect 7-inch HD LIVE touchscreen radio. Power comes from a 1.2-litre 69bhp petrol engine.

MG Motor UK is on a bit of a roll – beating 2017's new car annual registrations volume by early July and on course to double sales in 2018. MG's growth is being driven by the new MG ZS compact SUV, which starts from £12,495 and includes a seven-year manufacturer warranty.

Most important new car for Honda this

Most important new car for Honda this year is the fifth-generation CR-V. It goes on sale here in September – with only one engine on offer, a turbocharged 1.5-litre petrol. There is no diesel option but a petrol/electric hybrid arrives in 2019.

SEAT boasts sales so far in 2018 make it Britain's fast-growing volume car brand. Sales have been helped by the company's new mid-size Arona SUV, with more than 5,700 buyers since the start of the year. The Arona joins the larger Ateca SUV and kicks off at £16,750.

Isuzu has made its high specification D-Max Utah model available with a new finance offer. Until the end of September it is available for £239 a month (excluding VAT), over 23 months, with an initial rental of £2,150 on business contract hire. Standard kit includes heated front seats and a reversing camera.

Arriving by the end of the year is the Citroen C5 Aircross SUV, priced from around £22,700. Buyers will have two petrol and two diesel engines to choose from.

All of them will ride on Citroen's progressive hydraulic cushion suspension, aimed at improving ride comfort, which was first launched on the new C4 Cactus earlier in the year.

The Suzuki Jimny has a firm place in the hearts of drivers who love its no-nonsense go-anywhere abilities at a sensible price. So expectations are high for the imminent arrival of the fourth generation arrival of the fourth generation.

It will come with just one engine, a 1.5-litre four-cylinder petrol, replacing the outgoing Jimny's 1.3-litre engine.

FIRST DRIVE: Nissan Qashqai Tekna dCi 110 2WD by David Ward

s the old saying goes imitation is the best form of flattery which must have left broad smiles on the faces of Nissan bosses after they effectively created the compact crossover Sports Utility Vehicle market sector back in 2006 with their new Qashqai.

At the time it replaced the old and lumbering performing Nissan Terrano, an off-roader made in Spain alongside the Ford Maverick, and once it arrived here it took off and quickly become popular for families looking for a sensibly-sized, practical SUV that offered a choice of either four- or two-wheel-

Rival car makers soon jumped on the bandwaggon and today there's a plethora of such models in the market place yet remarkably the Qashqai, helped by periodic realistic updates inside and out, remains one of the strongest sellers both here and on the Continent.

Key here is offering motorists a wide range of models, again realistically priced, and the current Qashqai line-up starts at £19,300 with the 1.2-litre petrol model through to the range-topping 1.6-litre diesel model costing over £33,000.

There are basically five trim levels, starting with the Visia, then Accenta, N-Connecta, Teckna and lastly the Teckna+ with a choice of either petrol or diesel engines and tested here is the range topping Teckn+ with the four cylinder 108bhp 1.5-litre diesel engine under the bonnet and with a six-speed manual gearbox on board costing £30,350 on-the-road.

Continued improvements has kept the Qashqai's strong popularity and it's easy to see why because in this latest incarnation it's by far the most refined and quietest model so far and with that 1.5-litre diesel engine it genuinely returns impressive fuel consumption

The week's test driving involved some lengthy distant motoring – the best part of 800 miles plus – with a mixture of long motorway stretches, cross-country twisty roads and busy stop/ start city driving. Remarkably the Qashqai averaged 68.5mpg throughout and realistically for a change was almost spot on with the official combined figure of 74.3mpg and the added bonus, particularly for tax-conscious company car drivers, it's CO2 rating is 99g/km.

Apart from this better fuel consumption, the other major improvement across the new range is the Oashqai's ride and that's down to the Nissan backroom team in their Cranfield research centre.

They deserve praise for sorting out the suspension in coping with our very typical English bumpy and potholed roads and providing a much better all round ride that now gives the Qashqai quite a more comfortable ride and drive one would normally associate with a more up-market SUV.

The 1.5-litre diesel engine is also now more refined and typically has good pulling power down at low revs even when fully loaded with passengers, offers a decent gutsy performance out on the road while the six-speed manual gearbox now has a much crispier gear change feel about it than in earlier models.

The steering is precise and there's only a slight body roll when pushing the car fast through tight corners but it's not uncomfortable and road grip is fine – the dearer Tekna models sit on 19-inch alloy wheels as against 17-inch or 18-inch on cheaper versions and they give a much better ride in my view.

Naturally the up-market Tekna has more standard equipment and extras on board which is what a buyer would expect when shelling out the best part of thirty grand for the car such as a panoramic glass roof (great for giving more light inside for rear seat passengers in particular), Black Nappa leather trim, smart carbon effect dashboard trim, nice interior ambient lighting, electrically adjustable and heated front seats plus rear privacy glass and all round electric windows.

As for the driver the Tekna+ obviously has all the latest gizmos on board like ABS, EBD, Brake Assist, Chassis Control and a electronic stability system while the good, high driving position remains with again well placed controls and

There's a clear to read seven-inch touch screen with full navigation, eight Bose audio system and speakers, AppleCarPlay, Android Auto, Bluetooth and many in-built safety features including blind spot warning and plenty of airbagsX. Boot space (430 litres with the rear seats in use) is about the same as the previous model and there remains the useful 60/40 split rear folding seat and there's plenty of handy cubby holes for storage

Even taking on one of the lesser equipped current Qashqai models, such as the entry level Visia or Accenta, buyers will still find them decently equipped as Nissan has continued to upgrade them all with ever facelift.

Judging by its continued sales popularity this Sunderland-built compact SUV remains the leader of the pack for others to try and catch up with.

The incredible true story of a daring wartime escape

Held in a Nazi war camp in 1940s Poland, a pair of British soldiers strike up an unlikely friendship and plan an audacious break for freedom. Their plan is 'breath-taking in its dangers and sheer bloody cheek', but will their 900-mile route to Switzerland lead to safety? And can their friendship bear the most brutal test? Find out in this captivating and dramatic tribute.

Chiassaro chases Berlin Para medals

Harlow wheelchair racer has hectic Euro schedule

IT'S ONE down and four to go for Richard Chiassaro who couldn't be too disappointed despite miss-ing out on the podium in his World Para Athletics European Championship opener.

Five events await for the Harlow wheelchair racer in Berlin, a challenge he knows will push him all the way against Europe's

The first stage of the epic week began with Tuesday's T54 200m race, finishing fourth and narrowly missing out on a medal behind British team-mate Nathan Maguire.

Maguire.

But with this not one of his specialist events, Chiassaro knows he is only just getting warmed up in the Friedrich-Ludwick Lehr Scantnach wig-Jahn-Sportpark

"I don't feel like the race went badly," he said.

"I had a good start, my wheel lifted at one point around the bend but it wasn't anything.

"They were just faster than me.
Nathan did some sessions with me before we came out here, so I knew how well he was doing.

Pleased

"I said to him before that he could easily medal and he has just proved it, so I'm really pleased with him for that.
"Nathan is fast at starting and when he started to make some ground on me that made me lift my wheel and then that was it, I lost my speed and he just killed

"It's his first medal so I'm really pleased for him.'

Chiassaro won't have too much time to reflect on what has gone however, with vesterday (Wednesday) seeing him return for the T54 before competing over

Harlow's Richard Chiassaro (left) has got a busy schedule in Berlin

(Thursday).

The 36-year-old will do so with plenty of confidence still behind him, collecting four medals the last time he competed at European level, at Grosseto 2016.

He left with a 200m title on that occasion but with the body still feeling fresh, any fears of a dis-double the distance today appointing Championships are not being considered.

"My focus is on the 400m and the 800m, it would have been nice to have medalled in the 200m as well especially with the times I put in beforehand but they were just faster than me," added Chiassaro, who was born with spina bifida.

'The 400m is my best event so I will go back to the hotel, get some treatment and see what happens. "The 100m and 1500m are after that and I'll go and have some fun, I've got two events on Thursday so it's going to be difficult, so I'll head to the physio and make sure

I'm all sorted for that."

British Athletics works alongside UK Sport and the National Lottery to support the delivery of success at the world's most significant sporting events, principally the Olympic and Paralympic Games.

They do this via the funded initiative, the World Class Programme, one part of the British Athletics pathway.

Chauhan is the main man

HARLOW Town visited Oakfield Parkonians on Saturday and found a somewhat sporting wicket which was well below the standard required in Shepherd Neame Essex Cricket League Division Two.

Skipper Dan Farmer, on winning the toss, chose to bat first. Openers Ashley Alderson (14) and Shaun Alderson (21) got Town off to a reasonable start. followed by 51 from the in form Suraj Chauhan. But the home side, taking advantage of the poor surface, used their spinners to great effect

Ravi Teja (4-45) and Abdul Razzaq (4-7 off just seven overs), ran through the rest of the Town batting as they struggled to 105 all out in 35.1 overs.
With such a low score to chase

Oakfield must have thought they were home and dry. However, sharp fielding complemented the fine bowling of man of the match Suraj Chauhan whose devastating 13 over spell of medium fast pace saw him pick Off spinner Jibran Azam supported with 3-12.

They ran through the home side and Dan Farmer picked up the other wicket to fall as Town took 25 much needed points – grabbing victory from the jaws of defeat, with Oakfield all out in 26.3 overs for 59.

This weekend Town entertain Leigh on Sea who, after a bright start to the season find themselves in a relegation battle.

Relegation on the cards

HARLOW Cricket Club were well beaten by Wickford at home and barring three wins in their final three games look set to be relegated to Shepherd Neame Essex Cricket League Division

That could be confirmed if they lose this Saturday to Horndon on The Hill who sit just above the relegation places 19 points in front of Harlow. Having won the toss Harlow elected to put Wickford into bat knowing what they would have to do to win.

Wickford were in the batting mood and put on 271 for loss of just two wickets in 44.3 overs before declaring early. Captain Rehman Ahmed used eight different bowlers to try to make a breakthrough but to no avail.

The first wicket fell with the score at 47 bowled by Callum Sykes and the next bowled by Ross Vasani with the score at 146 and that was it.

With a big score to chase Harlow lost Luke Monger for 16 with 18 runs on the board. The next fell at 79 with Mitch Howarde going for 20. Ahmed who stayed around to score 75, but the rest of the team failed with the bat with Waheed Azam (22) the only other batsman to get double figures as Harlow were all out for just 167.

IT WAS a frustrating night for Danny Chapman and his Harlow Town side after two quick-fire second half goals saw them go down 2-1 to Potters Bar in the Velocity Trophy on Tuesday night.

Charlie Edwards opened the scoring in the 20th minute with a cool nutmeg.

However, goals in the 61st and 63rd minute from Bradley Sach and George Nicholas meant Harlow fell at the first hurdle of the Isthmian League's

League Cup for the second season in a row. On Saturday Harlow put in a battling display against Worthing – one of the Bostik Premier title favourites – despite being a man down for the majority of the game.

The visitors went ahead midway through the first half through a close range Ricky Aguilar finish, before Paul Rodgers' afternoon was ended early courtesy of a drastically mis-timed challenge.

The Hawks had good spells in the game, but Worthing's David Ajiboye finished in second half stoppage time to make sure of the three points and leave Harlow yet to find a win from their opening three games. New signing Emile Acquah, who joined on loan from Southend United, took to the field for Harlow late in the game and although he was a handful for the defence, he too was unable to convert the Hawks' pressure into a goal.
